Music Ushers in Christmas.

Christmas 1911 has come with its message of Peace and Good Will, and brought cheer to nearly every household in Gettysburg.

Last Saturday with its sunshine brought a very large crowd from the country to town and everybody, his wife and bairns in the town were out to do their last shopping. The stores were crowded and the merchants say that the Christmas business was the best ever.

The Christmas exercises were held by the Sunday Schools as told in our last issue, by the United Brethren on Thursday evening, by the Presbyterian on Saturday and Sunday, by Christ Lutheran and Methodist on Sunday evening, by the Reformed and St. James Lutheran on Christmas evening. The exercises were made up of songs and recitations, dialogues, in which the scholars participateed. The exercises were excellent and the smaller children were cute and cunning in their parts.

Christmas was ushered in most appropriately with music and singing. At midnight the Citizens' Band began a tour of the town stopping at a number of points and playing. A midnight song service was given in the Episcopal church. Later several crowds sang at different points in the town. A dawn service was held at Brua Chapel, the Chautauqua Choir under the leadership of I. L. Taylor, furnishing the music for the occasion.

Then when the hundreds of pairs of little eyes popped open bright and nappy on Christmas morn they found that Santa Clause had been to town sure enough and had delivered a goodly load of all kinds of presents and with love and good cheer.

Former Citizen in New Company.

The Farmers' Produce Company of Harrisburg, was chartered at the State Department recently, for the purpose of buying, selling and dealing in farm products, wholesale and retail. The capital is $30,000, divided into 300 shares of $100 each. Among the incorporators and one of the twelve directors in the new company is Armstrong D. Bowers, of near Harrisburg, formerly of Huntington township.

Ran Iron Rod in Eye.

Luther Williams, of Latimore township, narrowly escaped losing the sight of his left eye on Tuesday afternoon of last week when he ran into the end of an iron rod at the State Road schoolhouse. The young man was playing ball at the afternoon recess and running to catch a fly ball he came in contact with the end of an iron rod, receiving a painful cut over the left eye which required three stitches to close. Had the rod struck a quarter of an inch lower down the eye-sight no doubt would have been destroyed.

50TH ANNIVERSARY PLANS

SHOULD COVER A LONGER PERIOD THAN FOUR DAYS.

In another column appears a resume, which seems to be more or less official of the plans for the Gettysburg Fiftieth Anniversary Celebration. These plans, it is understood are more or less tentative and before they are finally determined upon should be studied and scrutinized by every one interested in the success of the celebration.

Gettysburg is more interested than any other spot in the world. Gettysburg wants a successful celebration, wants an occasion that will be remembered by every one who comes to Gettysburg with joy and an inspiration. It wants a celebration that will become a cherished memory because it fittingly and appropriately celebrated the event and one that everyone enjoyed on account of the comforts for enjoying the same.

Such a celebration should be and we hope is the first thought of those who are planning the same, for it is going to be the last great reunion of the boys who wore the Blue and Gray. "All surviving soldiers of the Civil War, North and South, shall be requested to take part as invited guests," are the inviting words of the commission. The guests will have reached an average age of over three score and ten, they can not be subjected to exposure, poor accommodations, crowded conditions. They are entitled to the best care. Everything that can be done for their comfort and happiness should be the object kept in view in planning.

The number of all these veterans of the Civil War, North and South, will run to huge figures in 1913. Today the surviving veterans of the Civil War as appears on the pension rolls is 550,000 and the surviving Confederate veterans are over 300,000, making a grand total of three quarters of a million men. This army will in 1913 be in excess of a half million men. It has been the expressed desire of the Grand Army of the Republic to hold their national encampment in Gettysburg in 1913 and it has been suggested that the United Confederate Veterans hold their annual meeting in Gettysburg in the same year. These desires and suggestions are most appropriate and a most desirable result to be brought about.

The survivors of the Battle of Gettysburg North and South can be safely estimated to be not less than 50,000. The Civil War brought into the field in the North 2,000,000 soldiers and today more than one-fourth of this number survive. More than 200,000 soldiers, North and South, took part in the Gettysburg campaign and more than a fourth or 50,000 are alive today.

This great celebration of the Battle of Gettysburg is not intended to be a narrow occasion limited to the survivors of the Battle of Gettysburg but its purpose is a broad one, in remembering the battle to celebrate the national peace in a great peace memorial and the celebration should not be given a limited or restricted significance, but a great, broad, national interpretation.

With hundreds of thousands of veterans as proposed guests, it follows that many of these guests will bring a wife, a daughter, a son, granddaughter or grandson, and the guests and their immediate relatives will be a tremendous throng such as Gettysburg has never seen since the great battle.

To these numbers must be added the generations born since the Civil War and for every guest it would seem to be reasonable to estimate one or two or three of the general public.

These estimates give enormous results. Limited to survivors of the battle and as many more of the general public gives a grand total of 100,000 which is more than likely to be swolen to two, thre, four or many times that number and in addition there will be thousands of the Regular Army brought here, likely also the National Guard of Pennsylvania and other States.

To make a great State and National event commensurate with the heritage of ninety million people, whether 100,000 souls come to Gettysburg, 200,000, 300,000 or more, it is a proposition absolutely true and can not be demonstrated to the contrary, that the celebration can not be successfully pulled off in four (4) days' time. A four days' celebration is a physical impossibility and the proof of this is open to any one who will come to Gettysburg and study the situation from the point of view of the place where the celebration is to be held.

Let us name a few of the reasons why a four days' celebration is a physical impossibility, and in a town more accustomed to adjust itself to immense crowds than any other point in the country.

The two railroads entering the town are single track roads and these two roads with their well known ability to handle great crowds can not carry more than 20,000 a day, take care and return the cars and provide for a freight traffic such as this big throng will require. To bring but 100,000 veterans, soldiers, guards and public would take 5 days to get them here, 4 days for the celebration and 5 days to take them away and it is absurd to contemplate such a movement for the 100,000 would want to come at one time, the day before the celebration starts.

Next, if every one of the 1,000 residences in Gettysburg were thrown open to the visitors, if every public place was prepared for their lodging, this town would be crowded to its utmost capacity with 15,000 people and lodging beyond that number, whether for veterans or visitors, will be a problem for the celebration commission to solve.

Camps on every side might be the solution for the public but hardly for veterans three score and ten years of age. They should have the protection of floors and roof.

Again, the water system of Gettysburg that has successfully taken care of encampments forming a community of four times the population of the town, might be able to provide for 50,000 or more but not for hundreds of thousands for a four days' celebration.

Gettysburg is without a hospital and camps would have to be arranged in the most sanitary way and hospital protection provided for the town and camps and in a community where there are no hospitals a hurried four days' celebration would be without thorough sanitary and health protection.

Many other unanswerable reasons are open to verification of the commission, and the physical impossibility of a four days' celebration demands an anniversary of such length as the circumstances require, two weeks, three weeks, or as long as the Gettysburg campaign covered, two months.

A celebration covering a fortnight, or a month or two months could be arranged so that there should be a Veterans' Day, a Military Day, a Civic Day, a National Day, as the commission proposes. The States could be given specified days for their celebration, and by a program the crowd could be kept a moving one and one well within the physical possibilities of Gettysburg, including comfort and care to the aged veteran, for dividing the celebration in this way the State could provide protection in barracks and temporary shelter.

A celebration of such length as the circumstances demand would give the veterans an opportunity to see the field, go over it, study it, hold reunions and unquestionably many regimental reunions would be the desire of the old soldier. it would enable visitors to be taken over the field in conveyances that a packed condition would make almost impossible and there have been occasions with 25,000 to 30,000 present when sight seeing and transportation over the battlefield was difficult, sometimes impossible.

A very short celebration would discourage outsiders to venture on lodging and boarding facilities which a longer one would encourage and a longer one could be most appropriately contributed to by the nation erecting a temporary exhibition hall to contain an exhibit of the arms used during the Civil War alongside with a modern military equipment.

The State could most appropriately erect a temporary building for the display of battle flags of Pennsylvania and other memorials, States, G. A. R. Posts and individuals would loan for the occasion.

There are many ways to make a long celebration interesting from beginning to end, receptions by the commission to the governors as they would come one at a time. Speeches and addresses at the many events which could be easily heard. If it was physically possible to get only a goodly proportion of the veterans to make a pilgrimage to Gettysburg as proposed by the commission, in four days, it would take acres to hold them sitting or standing and there would be tens of thousands who would not hear a syllabie of the spoken exercises.

Let us have a celebration in 1913 that veterans, their families, and the general public may enjoy in comfort, so that the memory of the Gettysburg celebration will be to them an inspiration and here is a Happy New Year for the strenuous work to be done to make an appropriate celebration of the anniversary of the Battle of Gettysburg of such length as the physical possibilities demand.

Flouring Mill Project.

The second meeting for the purpose of organizing a steam flouring mill in New Oxford was held recently. The meeting was well attended and a great deal of interest shown. Mr. Etzler, of Woodsboro, Md., was present and gave some valuable information. The committee appointed at a former meeting reported that it would take about $25,000 to place a mill in working order. This committee was continued and authorized to solicit subscriptions for this enterprise.

The COMPILER would suggest to these enterprising citizens of New Oxford instead of a flour mill, a white coal plant, convert the power in the Conowago into electrical energy and from the energy realized light your town and homes and furnish power for the operation of plants—a flour plant then. But first go after the white coal plant. Make power and plants will seek your power.

Gordon Held for Court

Joseph Gordon, who was arrested Monday, December 11, charged with carrying concealed deadly weapons, assault and battery and disturbing a religious meeting at Green Spring United Evangelical Church, on the Saturday previous, was given a hearing before Justice of the Peace C. H. Richter, of Berwick township. After hearing the evidence Squire Richter committed Gordon to jail to await the action of the grand jury.

THREE PRISONERS ESCAPE

SHERIFF FISSEL IS KNOCKED DOWN BY BLOW ON HEAD.

The most daring and dastardly escape from jail was made by three prisoners on Christmas evening. It is doubtful whether in the history of the jail a Sheriff had ever been attacked in the way Sheriff Fissel was in order to effect an escape. The attack was in a way that the offender took the chances of committing murder to make that escape. The only reason why Sheriff was not killed was because he was not hit on the right spot on the head. The attack was entirely unprovoked, and has every indication of being planned and a time being chosen when he would be off his guard.

There has never been an official at the jail more kind than Sheriff Fissel and his family and on Christmas day they had gone to much trouble to give the prisoners a good Christmas dinner, which all had enjoyed.

It is said that during the day one of the men who escaped had asked whether the Sheriff and his family had gone out to take Christmas dinner anywhere, evidently concluding there would be fewer people about the jail on that day to interfere with them in their proposed villainy.

Sheriff Fissel had been about the jail most of the day and all evening and at the usual time for closing up at about half past eight, went to the locked iron door leading into the corridor and told the prisoners assembled in the corridor that it was bed time. Those in the corridor at once began to disperse, going to their cells. The Sheriff did not notice anything unusual and unlocked the door so that he could enter the corridor and lock each cell door.

It is always customary with the Sheriff to first lock himself in the corridor before proceeding to lock each cell door, and he turned to lock the corridor door. Joseph Gordon had taken a position in corner of corridor evidently concluding what the Sheriff would do and that in turning around he would not be noticed. No sooner did the Sheriff have his back to him in act of turning the key in lock than Gordon jumped at Sheriff Fissel. He had in his hand a beer bottle in which vinegar is kept for the use of the prisoners at their meals and with all his might he brought the bottle down on the head of Sheriff Fissel. The blow was one intended to fell, if not kill the Sheriff, and he went to the floor stunned.

At once the key to the corridor door was in the hands of one of the prisoners, the barred door unlocked and the three prisoners, Joseph Gordon, James Pittenturf and John Brannon, were bolting for freedom. Sheriff Fissel struggled to his feet dazed from the blow, but the three most desperate prisoners had gone and there was no movement on the part of the others to join in the flight.

Archie Clay was in the kitchen working at the stove with a poker, and hearing the running came into the hall of the jail in time to see the three go out the front door. He gave chase and saw Pittenturf and Brannon turn eastward and Gordon westward. The latter was nearest to him and Clay threw his poker at him and followed him giving an alarm until Gordon disappeared down the alley at J. C. Hoke's residence. A general alarm quickly went over the town and soon Deputy Sheriff Geo. Fissel, County Detective Wilson, and policemen were on the ground and efforts were started to apprehend the escaped prisoners.

Dr. J. P. Dalbey responded immediately to the call sent him and found that Sheriff Fissel was not seriously hurt, the skull not being fractured in any way, but from the wound given there had been a copious flow of blood drenching collar, shirt and clothes of the Sheriff, so that he presented the sight of a much injured man.

The three escaped prisoners have been troublesome fellows and were considered by many as desperate characters. James Pittenturf faced a long term in the Penitentiary. He had been convicted and it was only a question of the length of the term awaiting the decision and he evidently realized that his only chance was an escape from the Adams county jail—at no time too secure. After the November court he complained of his solitary confinement in his cell while others were allowed the freedom of the corridor and finally his incessant begging for this privilege gave it to him.

John Brannon plead guilty to chicken stealing and carrying concealed deadly weapons and was sentenced at the November court to eight months in jail the sentence to jail being given as he would be needed to testify in a case at the January court. Later the Claybaugh woman plead guilty and received her sentence to the Penitentiary. This prisoner admitted he had served a term in the Huntingdon Reformatory. He said he came from the neighborhood of Orrtanna and had known the Claybaughs when they lived in the mountains.

Joseph Gordon, the third escaped prisoner, and who struck Sheriff Fissel, was in jail awaiting trial on the charge of carrying concealed deadly weapon, assault and battery and disturbing religious meeting at church near Bittinger's. With a companion he had gone to the church and after the meeting was out started a fight and left the impression of being desperate characters, outlaws. It is said his relatives at Philadelphia were informed of his arrest and had replied that they had helped him out of escapades for the last time and he would have to take whatever punishment his misdeeds brought him.

Two robberies are reported during the night and it is believed that this trio or two of them are responsible for the deeds. The store of Thomas Bros. at Biglerville was broken into about midnight. A neighbor, Mr. Seasely, was awakened by what seemed to be an explosion, but may have been the method adopted to gain admission. Glass windows were broken either in gaining access to store or in leaving. There was evidence that the robbers were after money and clothing, and the escaped prisoners did not have any too much clothing for an escape on a December night. Mr. Seasely gave the alarm and the desperadoes escaped.

They are next heard of at Guernsey where the warehouse of Zach Peters was entered and money drawer broken into and $12 taken with some postage stamps and other articles.

Three men have been apprehended at Goodyear and are awaiting identification as we go to press.

Electric Bitters

Succeed when everything else fails. In nervous prostration and female weaknesses they are the supreme remedy, as thousands have testified.

FOR KIDNEY, LIVER AND STOMACH TROUBLE

it is the best medicine ever sold over a druggist's counter.

Despair and Despondency

No one but a woman can tell the story of the suffering, the despair, and the despondency endured by women who carry a daily burden of ill-health and pain because of disorders and derangements of the delicate and important organs that are distinctly feminine. The tortures so bravely endured cause untold misery upon the nerves if long continued.

IT MAKES WEAK WOMEN STRONG, SICK WOMEN WELL.

It allays inflammation, heals ulceration and soothes pain. It tones and builds up the nerves. It fits for wifehood and motherhood. Honest medicine dealers sell it, and have nothing to urge upon you as "just as good."

It is non-secret, non-alcoholic and has a record of forty years of cures. Ask Your Neighbors. They probably know of some of its many cures.

If you want a book that tells all about women's diseases, and how to cure them at home, send 21 one-cent stamps to Dr. Pierce to pay cost of mailing only, and he will send you a free copy of his great thousand-page illustrated Common Sense Medical Adviser—revised, up-to-date edition, in paper covers. In handsome cloth binding, 31 stamps. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

OUR RAREST SILVER DOLLAR

NOT THAT OF 1804 BUT THE PATTERN COIN OF 1776.

But Two Known to Exist, and the One Recently Shown is Valued at $5,000.

A United State silver pattern dollar, dated 1776 and valued at $5,000, which was exhibited at Chicago at the convention of the American Numismatic Association, brought to the immediate attention of both the general public and collectors a silver piece which for rarity, value and historical worth completely eclipses the celebrated 1804 dollar, or indeed any other coin in the United States series. Even in some respects it is more interesting than the excessively rare and valuable silver pattern dollar or "mark" of 1783, proposed by Robert Morris, the "Financier of the Revolution."

This coin, which is known as the Continental Currency dollar, is owned by H. O. Granberg of Oshkosh, Wis., and represents unquestionably the very first metallic issue to bear the stamp of the United States, or United Colonies, as the confederation was originally known. The Continental dollar preceded by nine years the issue of the first regularly authorized cent of 1787—the Fugio or Franklin cent—and the issue of the latter coin no doubt was largely influenced by this first dollar, for it bore its principal features of design.

The Continental Currency dollar is about the size of an ordinary silver dollar and contains 378 grains of silver. On the obverse the principal design is a sun shining on a sundial, with the word "Fugio" to the left. Below the dial is the motto "Mind Your Business," a saying attributed to Franklin. This central design is enclosed by two circles, while around the border in large letters is the inscription "Continental Currency 1776." On the reverse is a circle of thirteen links, each of which bears the name of one of the thirteen colonies. In the center is a radiation, which encloses a double circle, in which are the words "American Congress. We Are One."

No information as to where the Continental Currency dollar was made can be obtained. But it is thought to have been produced by one of the engravers of Birmingham, England, in which city were made many of the coins that were circulated in this country during Colonial days and the most of which are now highly valued by collectors.

The design of the dollar was evidentaly suggested by the devices of the first Continental currency paper issues. On the obverse of one of these notes was a representation of a sun as a human face shining upon a dial, with the word "Fugio." Just above was a representation of the moon, also as a face. (The latter, however, found no place in the design of the silver dollar). Underneath the dial was the motto "Mind Your Business." The reverse design of the note showed almost the identical design borne by the Continental dollar and seems to have been embodied intact.

Several varieties of the Continental dollars are now known, and not only were there various designs showing trifling differences but they occur in different metals, silver, brass and white metal. The rarest of the series, the one owned by Mr. Granberg, shows marked differences from some of the others. Underneath the dial and above the motto is inscribed in small letters "E G Fecit." "E G" are supposed to have been the initials of the engraver of the dies.

From what can be learned there are only two specimens of the above dollar known in silver, the one owned by Mr. Granberg and another said to be in the collection of an Eastern historical society. The variety is also known in brass and white metal. The specimens in the latter two metals are also rare and held at a premium. The one in brass is much rarer than that in white metal.

The next rarest variety of the Continental Currency dollar is of similar design to that mentioned above, but the engraver in cutting the dies made an error in spelling "currency" with but one "r." A similar specimen, showing this error, and the only one known in the metal, was formerly in the collection of John G. Mills of Albany, whose collection was sold in 1904. The coin at that time brought $560. Since that time the values of Colonial coins particularly have risen enormously and that dollar would now bring a very much higher figure if offered for sale.

The design showing the error was also struck in brass and white metal. It has been stated by experts that only five are known in brass. One of these also offered at the Mills sale, brought $27, which would be largely advanced if sold to-day. The same variety in white metal brought $18 at the Mills sale.

There must have been a considerable issue of coins of this design in white metal, judging by the number of dies that were made, as evidenced by the known specimens. One design, with the error in the spelling of "currency," shows a comma under the letter "n." It was struck in brass from recut dies. But two such specimens are known, and the last record of sale of one, the Parmelee sale of 1890, held in New York City, was $26. Even the commonest of the white metal specimens are held at a premium of several dollars.

The only contemporary mention of these pieces is given in Crosby's "Early Coins of America" and was taken from Watson's "Chemical Essays" (Dublin, 1791), in reference to coins of this design struck in tin.

Said he: "The Congress in America had recourse to the same expedient (evidently discussing the striking of pewter coins); they coined several pieces of about an inch and a half in diameter and of 240 grains in weight, on one side of which was inscribed in a circular ring near the edge "Continental Currency, 1776," and within the ring of rising sun with "Fugio" at the side of it shining upon a dial, under which was "Mind Your Business." On the reverse were thirteen small circles, on each of which was inscribed the name of some one of the thirteen States; on another ring within these was inscribed "American Congress" and in the central space "We Are One." I have been particular in the mention of this piece of money because, like the leaden money which was struck at Vienna when that city was besieged by the Turks in 1529, it will soon become a great curiosity. I estimated the weight of a cubic foot of this Continental currency; it was equal to 7,440 ounces. This exceeds the weight of our best sort of pewter and falls short of our worst. I conjecture that the metal of the Continental currency consisted of twelve parts tin and one lead."

The reverse design of the Continental dollar was also used in conjunction with a very rare medal issued in 1783 in commemoration of the final arrangement for peace between England and America. The obverse of this medal showed Britania seated facing to the left. By her side is a shield with the crosses of St. George and St. Andrew. In her left hand is a spear and her right is extended to an Indian queen, who is advancing with a bow in her right hand and quiver behind her back. Between them flies a dove with an olive branch. In the distance is a view of London, in which appear St. Paul's Cathedral and the Monument. It is said that there are only two known specimens of this medal, one of which, formerly owned by Dr. Charles Clay of Manchester, England, was sold in New York in 1871 for $31. It is not known where the piece is now located. The design was struck only in tin.

Spraying Benefits Fruit.

A prominet railroad official called the attention of State Zoologist, H. A. Surface, to a rumor which he had heard in one portion of Pennsylvania to the effect that spraying produced fruit of poor quality. He suggested that this wrong idea should be corrected before it gains further ground. In reply to this Dr. Surface wrote as follows:

"I note with unusual interest that in the vicinity of West Chester, Pa., the fruit is reported as large and fine in color, but poor in quality and flavor, with the prevalent opinion that this is due to spraying. I can only say that if we would devote our energy in chasing down and controverting one-half of such rumors that get started, we could do nothing else but chase phantoms. Let those who wish to raise fruits without spraying them try to do so, and they will find that they can not produce quality without it.

The best fruits grown in this State are invariably those in orchards that have been sprayed. Sprayed fruits keep longer and have the best quality. They are the ones that take the prizes in the various County and State Exhibitions. There is absolutely no foundation for the rumor that spraying impairs quality. Thus it seems to me to be almost unnecessary to give it much notice, especially as to do so would give it some standing and consideration, which such an absurb idea should not have.

Not a Reformer.

I haven't any time to tell
My neighbor how to run his shop,
For all I know he's doing well,
To ask him though I shall not stop.
I take for granted that he knows
Just what his business venture needs;
And from the way my garden grows,
It keeps me busy cutting weeds.

If I should pause to tell him how
He ought to run his own affairs,
My little wheat field, I allow,
Would very soon be full of tares,
I find it's all that I can do
To keep my own front porch swept clean
And I must hustle all day through
To keep myself from getting mean.

When I have stacked up all the wood
That in this life I'll ever need,
When I have made myself so good
That I am free from hate and greed,
When I've no beam in either eye,
I may have time to journey then
Around the neighborhood and try
To purify my fellow men.

TESTED AND PROVEN

There Is a Heap of Solace in Being Able to Depend Upon a Well-Earned Reputation.

For months Gettysburg readers have seen the constant expression of praise for Doan's Kidney Pills, and read about the good work they have done in this locality. Not another remedy ever produced such convincing proof of merit.

Mrs. Charles Kennel, 401 S. Washington St., Gettysburg, Pa., says: "I publicly recommended Doan's Kidney Pills two years ago and I have not changed my opinion of them. I still consider this remedy the best one on the market for kidney trouble. A member of my family suffered from rheumatism and kidney complaint and was subject to acute attacks of backache. There was a stiffness and lameness across the loins especially noticeable in the morning and tired, languid feeling was in evidence. Doan's Kidney Pills, procured at the People's Drug Store, brought the first relief that had ever been received and when they have been taken since then, benefit has always followed. It gives me great pleasure to tell of the merits of this remedy."

$3000 for Nesting Wild Pigeons

In recent years considerable inquiry and interest has been manifested by local gunners and others, as to what has become of the wild pigeons—so numerous many years ago in this section and other parts of the state. For some cause they are almost extinct—at least in this part of the state.

Forty years ago these birds were very plentiful in spring and autumn of the year, in the woods of this section. "Rahn's woods," near Sell's Station, "Hostetter's woods," and "Geiselman's bottom," near Brushtown, along the Little Conewago creek, were the most favorite grounds for sportsmen in quest of this species of game. The large tract of woodland, near New Chester, and Gitt's woods, about a mile east of New Oxford, were also frequently visited by gunners where the birds gathered in large numbers.

The only instance known that these birds hatched in this part of the state was about 80 years ago, when a number of young ones were observed by Charles Wrede, deceased, in "Myers' bottom," between New Baltimore and the Pigeon Hills, in the month of June.

Two years ago, it is claimed, a flock of pigeons was seen in a woods near New Chester, along the Big Conewago creek.

The report of "The Birds of Pennsylvania," by Dr. B. H. Warren, ornithologist of the Pennsylvania State Board of Agriculture, 1890, stated that in 1880 wild pigeons were found in great numbers in Elk, Forest, Warren, McKean, Potter and Cameron counties. In the region about Emporium, Cameron county, and near Kane, McKean county, immense quantities of these birds were killed, packed in barrels and shipped in carloads to the New York markets.

They built their nests in trees and laid only two eggs at a time, but bred twice or oftener in a year, and both the male and female took part in incubation.

No wild pigeon is known to have been in this immediate vicinity since 1875, when four were shot by a gunner in Rahn's woods, near Sell's Station.

Two years ago a number of men became interested in trying to save this beautiful and typically American bird from the doom of utter extermination. A committee was formed, and it was decided to issue rewards, not for dead Passenger pigeons, which would defeat their very object, but for evidence of an undisturbed nesting. There are now open, and have been for two years, rewards amounting to about $3,000 for the person who shall report, without disturbing them, a nesting pair of Passenger pigeons. An expert ornithologist will be sent to identify the birds, and if they prove to be as reported, the reward will be turned over to the finder.

Divorce in the Sudan.

Little is known of divorce among primitive peoples; consequently an article contributed by a writer in a French review on the traditional rules for divorce practiced among the Boudouma people, dwelling about Lake Chad, is of interest. If the husband demands divorce we learn that he has to generally renounce the dot. This is always the case if he be a prodigal. A wife demanding divorce without good reasons must restore to her husband double the value of his settlement upon her. If she cannot do so he must wait until she again marries, and the new husband has to take this liability. If the wife has good grounds for divorce she retains the dot.—London Globe.

RETIRING OFFICIALS.

In another column appear the pictures of the Democratic county officials who have faithfully served their county during their terms of office, and who with District Attorney Neely and the Republican County Commissioner Weikert, Republican Director of the Poor Taylor and Republican County Auditor Fohl retire from their offices this week with a single exception, County Auditor Luther B. Slaybaugh being re-elected for another term. It is only saying what is highly deserved that these officials have discharged their duties with ability and great faithfulness. They have always been ready to perform every duty and attention thoroughly and courteously. They have been a happy court house family, and in their highly efficient services have brought great credit to themselves, their party and county.

PENNSYLVANIA IS FOR WILSON

Representative A. Mitchell Palmer, Democratic national committeeman for Pennsylvania, while stopping in Philadelphia recently on his way to Washington, repeated emphatically his earlier declarations to the effect that he favors the nomination of Governor Wilson, of New Jersey, for the Presidency.

Mr. Palmer was annoyed by the publication of an article in a Philadelphia paper to the effect that he believed the State should send an uninstructed delegation to the National Convention, and falsely quoting him as saying his district will not send instructed delegates.

Apparently that article, which spoke of the Wilson boom as 'waning in the State" was designed as a mischief maker. The inference to be drawn from it, so far as Mr. Palmer is concerned, was that he was seeking opportunity to turn the Pennsylvania delegation against the New Jersey Governor.

"For months I have openly favored the nomination of Governor Wilson," said Mr. Palmer, "and I still favor it. I believe the great majority of the Democrats of this State desire Wilson's nomination, and that the delegation will be a Wilson delegation. In my judgment Governor Wilson is a great man, a strong leader of the present-day progressive thought and a sound Democrat. He will be nominated and elected.

"I have tried at all times to make it clear that my purpose and that of others in the reorganized Democracy is to avoid any semblance of 'giving orders' for any candidate. Our organization stands for the right of the Democratic voters to make the selection, and is founded upon the promise that the old style of politics, in which the giving of orders was practiced, will be done away with."

Sale of Farms.

There has been great activity in the sale of farms in this county and real estate has been bringing good prices and seems to be on the raise throughout the county. Unquestionably fruit growing has contributed to this more than anyone factor. Apple crops are paying better than any other crop and that this county contains an apple belt the equal to, anything in the whole country has led many to buy. Among recent sales are the following:

Rufus Lauver has sold his fruit farm of 22 acres near Biglerville. Only 8 acres are in 8. 12 and 20 year old apple trees and Mr. Lauver's annual crop has frequently been worth in excess of $2,000.

The farm of Annie M. L. Wilson near Goldenville in Butler township has been sold by Edward A. Weaver real estate attorney, to Jacob Group.

The 58 acre farm of J. A. Wagner near Hunterstown has been sold by Runk and Peckman to H. J. Walter of Mt. Pleasant township.

The small farm of the estate of Maria Hostetter in Union township has been sold to A. F. Hostetter at $75 an acre.

George Grove, mail carrier of route 4 from this place has sold his Straban township farm to C. O. Myers for $3,000.

John Myers, a son-in-law has bought the Solomon Gable farm of 126 acres in Hamilton township for $62 an acre.

50TH ANNIVERSARY PLANS

AS TENTATIVELY ELABORATED BY THE COMMISSION

Will Need Larger and Longer Elaboration To Get Them to Gettysburg and Environments.

No other semi-centennial celebration of the events of the great Civil War which, threatening the life of the republic through four years, resulted in welding North and South together as never before and formed an epochal point in the nation's career and history, will hold the same profound and universal interest that appertains to the fiftieth commemoration of the Battle of Gettysburg.

The preparations for it have been proceeding quietly but effectively from the time that the act of the Pennsylvania legislature of 1909, creating "The Fiftieth Anniversary of the Battle of Gettysburg Commission" was approved by Governor Stuart and the nine members to constitute its personnel were appointed by him, as the terms of the act required.

The chairman of the commission, General Louis Wagner, is well known and its secretary is Rev. J. Richards Boyle, of Philadelphia, who during the war served as captain and assistant quartermaster United States Volunteers. The other members of the commission appointed by Governor Stuart were Brig. Gen. William D. Dixon, Major R. Dale Benson, Col. R. Bruce Ricketts, Adjutant William Penn Lloyd, Sergeant and Brevet Major Alexander McDowell, Corporal Irwin K. Campbell and Private Lewis T. Brown, of the 102nd Pennsylvania Volunteers. Of these Lewis T. Brown of the 102nd P. V. and William Penn Lloyd have died and the vacancies have been filled by Governor Tener appointing Major William J. Patterson of Pittsburg and Captain William E. Miller of Carlisle, respectively, in their places.

The Act creating the commission made it the duty of its members, "serving without compensation, other than their actual and necessary expenses," to "consider and arrange for a proper and fitting recognition of the battle" which is recognized as the crucial event of the war. It gave the commission the needful authority to invite the co-operation of the congress of the United States, and of other States and Commonwealths, and laid upon it the duty of making report to the next session of the Pennsylvania legislature.

By the time set for the conference of all the delegates with the commission to be held at Gettysburg October 13 and 14 1910, (after assembling on the morning of the thirteenth at Harrisburg and being received by Governor Stuart) the invitation of the commission to participate in the "Fiftieth Anniversary Celebration" had been accepted by the congress and all the States including Arizona and New Mexico, the District of Columbia, and the territories of Alaska, Hawaii and Porto Rico, and representatives named by all but Oregon and Hawaii. Of the congressional committee Senator Heyburn and Oliver were present and Representatives Lamb and Lafean; Senator Raynor and Representative Tawney being unable to attend. The representatives of the twenty-four States, the District, and the Territory of Porto Rico were present to take in the discussion. The results of the conference, and of later meetings of the commission to elaborate suggestions are embodied in the two reports made last winter to the chief executive of the Commonwealth—that to Governor Stuart bearing date of January 19, the completer one to Governor Tener, transmitted on February 17.

The plans so far formulated are complete in general outline. They propose that the celebration shall include the first four days of July, 1913, the first to be known as Veterans' Day. "In it all surviving soldiers of the Civil War, North and South, shall be requested to take part as invited guests, under the direction of the commander-in-chief of the Grand Army of the Republic, that of the United Confederate Veterans, and under such order as these officers in connection with the commission may direct, the United States flag only to appear."

Wisconsin and South Dakota were the States earliest to take action for sending all soldiers who participated, on either side, in the battle, as delegates to the anniversary celebration. July 2 is to be known as Military Day and to be under command of the chief of staff of the United States Army, the detail from each branch of the army to be made by the Secretar yof War; representatives of the National Guard to be chosen and invited for merit. Each command to be attended by a military band.

July 3, to be known as Civic Day, and to be under the personal supervision of the Governor of Pennsylvania. The participants to be the governor of the several States, their staffs and the general public. "A great chorus of voices from the leading choral societies of the country supported by the military bands, to furnish the music. The exercises on that day are to be held morning, afternoon and evening in the rostrum. Appropriate orations at the earlier services, and in the evening a sermon to be given, recognizing the Divine Providence in the rise and progress of the Republic."

July 4, to be known as National Day, at which the chief justice of the Supreme Court shall preside, and the president, vice-president, the cabinet, the justices of the Supreme Court, the speaker of the house of representatives and the congressional committee shall be guests of honor. "At 10 a. m. a great mass meeting shall be held at the rostrum at which prayer shall be offered, singing by the chorus and people shall be rendered, and an oration shall be delivered by the President of the United States. At high noon the cornerstone of the Peace Memorial shall be laid by the President, which act shall conclude the official services."

"On each day the veteran soldiers present shall be regarded as official guests, and shall be provided with seats in a body at all the official functions." This, explicitly stated, is as it should be.

It is of interest to know that [illegible] first suggestion to the commission "that whatever else might be determined upon, a permanent peace movement of some kind should, if possible, be dedicated on the field at the time of the jubilee celebration," was made by General Daniel E. Sickles, the senior surviving major-general of United States Volunteers, and now a retired general of the regular army, at the Gettysburg conference of the commission, in October a year ago. The motion following this suggestion and unanimously voted for, that the final day of the commemorative exercises shall be devoted to the subject of national and international peace, was made by Dr. M. G. Brumbaugh, representing Porto Rico. At the organization conference the first representative citizen upon by the chairman for an address was Sergeant John C. Scarborough of North Carolina, that State having been the earliest to respond to the invitation of the commission to participate in the jubilee anniversary. Mr. Scarborough served throughout the war as an enlisted man in the First North Carolina Infantry, and was present at the battle of Gettysburg.

The act of assembly passed at the last session of the legislature to enable commission to further carry out the provisions of the act of 1909 creating the commission made an appropriation of $50,000 or so much thereof as may be necessary, and further "provides" that "the total amount to be expended by the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania in connection with this celebration shall not exceed $250,000."

That proviso the commission in June last, after Governor Tener's approval of the act, in its circular letter addressed to the representatives of the United States of the United States their intention to ask an appropriation on the part of Pennsylvania that should be sufficient for the proper reception and care of and guests during their stay in Gettysburg will be granted in due time. It had already in its report of January, 1911, to Governor Stuart and that of February to Governor Tener distinctly stated that it should involve the aid of the Pennsylvania legislature to defray the transportation expenses of our own surviving soldiers, and the actual cost incurred in providing the shelter and the subsistence invited officers of the State and federal governments.

In the consideration of the limited facilities for reaching Gettysburg the commission is in conference with railroad and railway officials to remedy this defect. Also, besides conferring with the authorities of Gettysburg and its citizens' committee over its comparatively limited accommodations for visitors, the commission is planning a series of camps for the accommodation of those desiring to remain during the celebration; these camps to be by States or groups of States. The United States government will be asked to supply the camps equipage, and to detail an officer of the regular army with sufficient command to supervise and arrange the discipline and the policing of all these camps. The Gettysburg National Park Commission will be asked to locate them.

The dawn of the year 1912 will soon be upon us. Then with the realization that "next year will bring the anniversary of Gettysburg's battle" and an accompanying sense of something of the vastness of the proposed celebration, and of the difficulties that have to be met and surmounted in the field of program and accommodations, a multitude of people in addition to the veterans of the great year will find themselves glad to be in possession already of a comprehensive idea of what the commission has planned and the commonwealth will carry out—with the other States and the United States government co-operating.

DEATH'S HEAVY HAND

LEADING CITIZEN OF HUNTINGTON TOWNSHIP PASSES AWAY

Sudden Death of Miss Jennie Coburn Less Than Three Months Since Death of Her Mother.

W. M. R. R. Needs Many New Cars.

The Western Maryland Railway Company is about ready to place a $2,000,000 order for new cars for use when the Connellsville extension is ready to be opened. The company plans to purchase about 2,500 new cars and will announce the successful bidder within the next month or six weeks

The new line, now under course of construction between Connellsville, Pa., and Cumberland, Md., which will be opened some time next month, will give a through connection via Reading from New York City to Pittsburg. New cars, both passenger and freight, are being delivered for use and now others are expected to be ordered. Just what plans will be made for taking care of the freight from the Reading lines are not known yet. It is believed that the Western Maryland crews will run through Harrisburg and that the New York Central crews will take the trains there.

The official's report on the progress being made with the extension up to date follows: Grading, 96.5 per cent. completed; concrete work, 90 per cent. completed; bridge masonry completed; bridge superstructure, 95 per cent. in place; track laid, 40 miles; including 30 miles of main line, eight miles secondary main and the balance in sidings.

In the big Savage tunnel there remains only 90 feet more to bore in the heading before reaching daylight. This will be done in five or six days. Of the bench there remains 1,200 feet to be removed, and it is confidently expected that the line will be ready for operation by the first of the year, or possibly a few days before that time. There are still employed on the work 3,500 men, including the contractors and railroad company employes. Thirty "dinkey" engines and fifteen steam shovels are still at work cleaning up odds and ends of cuts and fills.

In Memory of James Smith.

The York County Historical Society last week held exercises to memorialize the life of James Smith two-term member of the Continental Congress and signer of the Declaration of Independence and a half century resident of York. The Rev. J. Ellery Tuttle, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church, who was admitted to membership in the society, declared that if the old courthouse in which the Continental Congress met, had been preserved, York would to-day be one of the most distinguished cities in this country.

Prof. George R. Prowell of York prepared an historical sketch of James Smith, which was read by Miss Lena Root. It covered the period of Smith's career from the time he immigrated to this country from Ireland, at the age of 16, to his death in York, in 1806, and his burial in the First Presbyterian churchyard on East Market street. James Smith, lawyer, statesman and patriot, was admitted to practice law at Lancaster and located in York in 1760, eleven years after York became the county seat. His residence stood on what is now the corner of South George st. and Mason alley.

Those were the days when lawyers like preachers, traveled over circuits and James Smith pursued his profession before the bars of York, Lancaster and Carlisle. He was the first practicing attorney in York and for ten years had the whole field in this section to himself. In 1774 he organized the York Riflemen, the first military organization west of the Susquehanna River, and about the same time he was chosen chairman of the committee of safety of York county. The essay briefly outlined his public services during and after the period of the Continental Congress, which are matters of general history.

Prof. Prowell's paper was an excellent tribute to the works of James Smith. The speakers who followed the reading of it requested the society to have it printed together with the extracts from speeches and writings of James Smith.

This is interesting history to all Adams county people, for James Smith was their representaive in the Continental Congress, Adams being not then created and being a part of York county.

Grangers to Try Cooperation.

The Pennsylvania Grangers, who concluded their state convention at Scranton last Saturday have great hopes for the success of the co-operative plan which was adopted formally by the convention and which the executive committee now will try to put through. The plan is said to be one of the most ambitious co-operative projects ever proposed.

The state organization, which includes 65,000 members, has sanctioned a plan that contemplates the formation of a central corporation under the management of the state officers, that will act as a parent concern to subsidiary co-operative corporations to be formed by the county granges.

The main body will buy factory outputs of farm implements, fertilizer and other merchandise used on the farm, thus getting the lowest possible price. The merchandise will then be distributed among the subsidiary corporations, where needed, and will be sold to the farmer without the various commissions and profits of middlemen tacked on. The state body will also find for the grange members favorable markets for their farm produce

To make co-operation a success the grangers are seeking to interest the trades unions in the project and conferences have already been held by grange leaders with officers of organized labor.

COVERLY'S SUBSTITUTE

Appearances Were Against Him.

"I'm sorry, Elizabeth," said Ralph Coverly, "that I must go to Chicago on business for the firm of Fabens & Coverly."

"Never mind, Ralph. My one week has been lovely, and I shall enjoy spending a quiet time with your mother."

"Mother will be delighted to have you with her constantly. An invalid's days are dull enough. But there is an elderly aunt coming tomorrow, and I'm afraid you'll not find it very amusing with just Aunt Agatha and mother. I've thought of a plan so that you might enjoy the program we planned and not miss any of the concerts or art galleries or even the opera."

"What is that, dear? Really, half of the anticipated pleasure was the knowledge that we were to be together."

Ralph hesitated, and then, as if dismissing some unworthy doubt from his mind, he said quickly:

"Why, I've spoken to Fabens. He's a mighty clever chap and is better versed in all the things you're interested in than I am. I'm such a practical fellow, Elizabeth. Well, I told Fabens all the things I'd planned we were to do the coming week and asked him to see that you didn't miss any of the pleasures."

"It's very thoughtful of you, Ralph."

The next morning when Elizabeth wandered downstairs to a late breakfast she found the expected Aunt Agatha established at the head of the table. She was a stern visaged lady, whose hair remained a shining black in defiance of threescore years. She wore gold spectacles with thick lenses, which magnified her dark eyes with startling results. An ear trumpet dangled from a ribbon over her shoulder, much like a powderhorn at the back of a hunter.

"Good morning, Miss Neal—or shall I say Elizabeth? My niece has written of you, and I've seen your picture. If you'll excuse my saying so, you're not at all the sort of girl I thought Ralph would marry! He always preferred brunettes, like myself. Well, men are fickle as the weather! It's too bad Mary is confined to her room. You will be very lonely." Miss Dale paused to take breath.

"Mrs. Coverly will enjoy having some one with her. She is so much alone except for the nurse," said Elizabeth.

"I can't hear a word you say," asserted Miss Dale calmly. "It doesn't matter. I can always guess what people are talking about at table. You probably remarked that you wouldn't be lonely at all during Ralph's absence. I know Dick Fabens, my dear, and a more fascinating man I never met. Ralph is very foolish to leave you in Dick's care. But, there, every one has his consolations, and that little dark beauty Ralph was so crazy about last year lives in Chicago. There, there! Don't get emotional!"

Elizabeth, angry and amused, watched her and when she was alone finished her breakfast and retired to her own room. Later her brief morning visit to sweet Mrs. Coverly brought forth the fact that Aunt Agatha had arrived from her suburban home at an early hour that morning. She had surveyed the house from attic to cellar and had interviewed the nurse and the servants with praiseworthy results.

Mrs. Coverly smiled indulgently and touched Elizabeth's serious face with a delicate forefinger. "Aunt Agatha is an angel at heart, Elizabeth, but her deafness has accentuated certain oddities in her manner, and she has adopted a freedom of speech that is sometimes alarming. Don't forget. I shall expect you to come in for our game of chess every evening if you don't mind devoting so much time to an old woman."

Elizabeth's answer was to kiss the hand that caressed her, and the next half hour was one of delightful intimacy with the mother of her prospective husband.

Aunt Agatha at luncheon was a repetition of Aunt Agatha at breakfast, and her deeply voiced monologue left the girl with a strange sense of desolation. For the first time since her engagement to Ralph there crept into her heart a vague disquiet as to his perfect loyalty. Who was this dark beauty of whom Aunt Agatha Dale babbled?

Two o'clock brought Dick Fabens with tickets for a matinee, and, as Aunt Agatha was too rheumatic to go far afield, Elizabeth went alone with Ralph's partner. During their brief ride in the carriage Elizabeth learned that Mr. Fabens was feeling much better and that the simple program Ralph had laid out appealed to his convalescent body and mind as nothing else could.

Dick Fabens was fascinating. Older than Ralph, he was attractive by reason of his contrasting gray hair and youthful face. He was strangely sympathetic to Elizabeth, and she found herself looking to him for confirmation of all her delight in each pleasure that came to her in the days that followed. He did not flirt with her; he did not make love to her. He was simply natural and unaffected, and by very reason of her enforced solitude at the Coverly home Elizabeth turned to him for congeniality and pleasure during those seven days.

Aunt Agatha suddenly disapproved of Dick Fabens' attention and expressed her opinion each morning. Elizabeth came to take a wicked delight in listening to those lectures, and frequent mention of the dark beauty in Chicago and Ralph's weakness in that direction hardened her heart against the absent lover. His daily letters were characteristically short, and her jealous eyes read between the lines that he was enjoying his stay in the Windy City. Then on Thursday the letters ceased coming, and Elizabeth stopped writing.

On Saturday morning she took counsel in her own room and decided that Ralph Coverly was tired of her. If he had not been, if he had really cared for her, would he not have hesitated at leaving a substitute for his own escort? Was it not to justify his own attentions to this other girl—whose name Aunt Agatha had once admitted to be Elsie—that he had provided a substitute? Fabens spoke little of his partner beyond saying that the coveted contract had been secured by Ralph.

Saturday morning Elizabeth went back to the boarding school, where she was a teacher of music, but before she went she inclosed her engagement ring in a tiny box, registered it and sent it to Ralph's office, with a brief note explaining her action. "It has all been a mistake," she said.

Aunt Agatha's farewell of her was prolonged and affectionate at the late breakfast, several hours after the ring and letter had been sent.

"Goodby, my dear Elizabeth. I've learned to love you dearly, and I've watched you closely during the past week while Dick Fabens has been taking you out, and you are a most unusual girl. Ralph has won a treasure indeed. We would have been so unhappy if he had cared for that Elsie girl who set her cap for him last year. It's a good thing she eloped with her chauffeur and went to Paris, for"— And so on until Elizabeth's brain reeled with the horror of what she had done.

Her farewell to Mrs. Coverly was tearful and brief, but she did not dare divulge the fact of her broken engagement to the woman who had taken the motherless girl to her warm heart.

At Fernciff the weeks passed drearily without word from Ralph. There was a picture postcard from Aunt Agatha, who had returned to her home, saying she trusted the missive found Elizabeth in good health. Then Elizabeth mailed a card to Miss Dale and hoped that lady was quite well, and so ended her connection with the Coverly family.

There came a day several months afterward when she received cards for Dick Fabens' wedding to some girl from New Orleans. She laid it away with a little sigh. It was merely an echo of the happy life she had dropped out of. She blamed herself bitterly for listening to Aunt Agatha's inane chatter and knew that she had wronged Ralph. And yet there was the fact that he had ceased writing to her. That might be easily explained. Letters often miscarried. There was no excuse for her doubt of her lover's constancy. She ought to have trusted him against everybody in the world, even as he would have done had the case been reversed.

That same day was a half holiday, and Elizabeth, weary with the strain of teaching and very unhappy, stole away to spend the afternoon alone in the beautiful chestnut woods that stretched behind the school buildings. The trees were in their summer glory of gold and brown, and through the scanty foliage there were glimpses of the clear blue sky. Where the trees fringed the banks of the tumbling river Elizabeth found a seat on a mossy rock.

The rushing of the river drowned all other sounds, and it was not until he stood beside her that Elizabeth knew Ralph Coverly had come at last. From very joy in his presence she was powerless to move.

He looked down at her, pale and worn and quite unlike his usual buoyant self.

"Elizabeth," he said desperately, "I've just had Fabens' invitation. If it isn't he, who is it?"

"Who is who?" asked Elizabeth weakly, her voice breaking as he caught her hand.

"The one who came between us," said Ralph hoarsely. "Aunt Agatha hinted—she wrote—it was Fabens, and you were both so happy, so I stopped writing and came home to find the ring and your letter. I was a beast to Fabens—thought he had cut me out with you—and then he stiffened up, and we've hardly been on speaking terms outside of business. Then this morning I found his wedding invitation in my mail, and so I came down to find out who the other man is. I would have staked my life on your faith, Elizabeth!"

"You may now. Wait, Ralph, till I tell you all," sobbed Elizabeth. But Ralph did not wait. His arms were about her and her sunny head on his shoulder while she poured out the misunderstanding and misery of those seven days.

"It's turned out for the best, dear," he comforted her. "This contract was a big thing, and so I am not going to wait another week for you. June is too far away. Give up your position and come. Mother needs you, and I do not dare run the chance of having to provide another substitute."

"Or another visit from Aunt Agatha," said Elizabeth devoutly.

The Lyre Bird.

The fully developed male lyre bird is one of the most handsome and notable of the forms of bird life of Queensland. The contour of the bird, with its long neck and stout gallinaceous feet, is by no means unlike that of a peacock, and the wonderful tail, possessed only by the male birds, fulfills a corresponding role of vain display. The bird executes antics for a train of female admirers on a raised earthen mound. For a short period of the year, about January, the lyre bird loses its characteristic plumes and has to be content with the sober plumage of its mate.

In Two Divisions.

Men are often divided into educated and ignorant, the rich and the poor, the famous and the unknown, but a division more marked than any other might be made between the strong and the weak. We meet them both in every walk of life. Their birth or education or general surroundings may be the same, but a sharp line divides those who govern their inclinations from those whose inclinations govern them. On the one side we see strength, accomplishment and value, on the other weakness, spasmodic and ill directed effort and inefficiency.

A Dramatic Situation.

Beau Brummel was once sitting at a table with one Bligh, who was known to be insane. The Beau, having lost a considerable stake, affected, in his farcical way, a very tragic air and cried out, "Waiter, bring me a flat candlestick and a pistol," upon which Bligh, who was sitting opposite to him, calmly produced two loaded pistols from his coat pocket, which he placed on the table, and said, "Mr. Brummel, if you are really desirous to put a period to your existence I am extremely happy to offer you the means without troubling the waiter." The effect upon those present may be easily imagined at finding themselves in the company of a known madman who had loaded weapons about him.

Henry VIII. and Puddings.

Bluff King Hal otherwise Henry VIII. of England, was exceedingly fond of puddings. At one time he gave a certain Mrs. Cornwallis a house in Aldgate for herself and her heirs forever "in reward of fine puddings." In King Henry VIII.'s private accounts occur again and again entries of his rewards to different housewives for bringing him puddings. A typical instance runs thus: "Item. The same day paid to the wife that made the king podings at Hampton corte, vis. vijid." This would be about $1.75, but its value was much greater when the entry was made. This love for "fine puddings" explains much in the familiar rotund figure of King Hal.

When the Negro Was Created.

The Mexican Indians, as well as those of most of the Central American republics, have a superstition to the effect that the negro was made before either the white man or the Indian or even before the sun was created. They account for his color by declaring that he was made and dried in the dark. Their own race, they say, was made in the morning of the first day between daylight and sunup. On this account they delight in a term which they apply to each other and which signifies "dawn people." The white man, "who fears darkness and cannot stand heat," was made, according to their belief, at noon on the first day of creation.—Exchange.

Wild California.

The geography published in 1812 contains the following startling description of that section of our country which Charles Dudley Warner baptized "our Italy:"

"California is a wild and almost unknown land, covered throughout the year by dense fogs as damp as they are unhealthful. On the northern shores live anthropophagi, and in the interior are active volcanoes and vast plains of shifting snow, which sometimes shoot up columns to inconceivable heights."

The book adds that some of these statements would seem incredible were they not so well authenticated by trustworthy travelers.

A Painter's Broken Arm.

A friend once entered the studio of George Inness, the American landscape painter, while he was at work and remarked that the picture on the easel seemed to him much better than certain former works of the artist. "Right!" said Inness. "This is going to be one of my best things, and the reason is that I have had the good luck to break my right arm and am obliged to paint with my left hand. You see," he added, showing his right hand in a sling, "this hand had become so darned clever that I could not catch up with it, and it painted away without me, while this hand"—showing the left, with which he held his brush—"is awkward and can do nothing without me."

SECRET OF LIVING.

If we can only come back to nature together every year and consider the flowers and the birds and confess our faults and our mistakes under the silent stars and hear the river murmuring in absolution we shall die young even though we live long, and we shall have a treasure of memories which will be like the twin flower, a double blossom on a single stem, and carry with us into the unseen world something which will make it worth while to be immortal.—Henry van Dyke.

Medical Inspection in Schools.

"Surprising conditions are being revealed in the inspection of the public schools of Adams county under direction of local physicians in compliance with the provisions of the school code.

Practically every school building examined up to this time, falls short of the requirements, either in regard to the proportion of light space or the number of cubic feet allotted to each pupil. There are also numerous defects in the pupils examined and in one school not one perfect pupil was reported.

The medical inspection was adopted in about 50 per cent. of the school districts in the county, the code making it optional and the other 50 per cent not accepting it."

Just what we expected, an explosion and exposure. But the conditions of the schools in Adams county are no worse than in other counties, in many rural districts. If the other 50 per cent. of the schools in Adams county are refused medical inspection it's the fault of the school boards. We believe that the Commissioner of Health should insist on the medical inspection of every school in Adams county, and the schools in every other county. We believe the Commissioner of Health has the power.

We know that the management and supervision of schools under the Old Regime, by school boards, in many rural districts, was not according to the provisions of the law; did not comply with the law requiring compulsory attendance of pupils or anything in particular for the betterment of the schools.

If school boards are to be the judges as to the necessity for medical inspection of schools, then some of them will never have it. And it is all due to the pecuniary end of it.

But, after all, we are progressing on one line, and that is compulsory attendance. In the last few weeks seven men were sent to jail for five days each, because they refused to pay fines for not compelling their children to attend school. If this course is followed in rural districts it will not take long to bring delinquent parents to a sense of their duty. If parents have no valid excuse for non-compliance with the law they must take the consequences. It seems no impression could be made on those delinquents by any other means. These cases do not apply to Adams county.

If a child over 14 can secure an employment certificate and prove that he is regularly employed, he can remain away from school. No firm or any other person has a right to employ any child between 14 and 16 years of age, during the term of compulsory attendance fixed by school boards, or accept service from such child unless the child furnishes or holds an employment certificate. The penalty is not less than $10 or more than $25 for the first offense or 10 days in the county jail, or either or both. So says one of the provisions of the code.

The $60,000 Smelter.

The Eagle Metalic Copper Company plant near Charmian, to begin operations this week, is located on the side of a hill about one-half mile below the Charmain station of the W. M. R. R It is 300 feet in length and includes the building containing the boilers, air compressors, electric light plant, engine and blower. The engine is 150 horse-power and the boilers 250.

Next to the boiler comes the smelter house which is connected with the dust flume, a tunnel shaped affair of concrete and bricks 170 feet in length 10 by 12 feet in depth and width. At the far end of the tunnel is a stack 104 feet in height It is in this tunnel that the fumes fly from the smelter and in the bottom of which collect the metals.

By the time the fumes reach the stack every particle of value will be extracted and when the fumes leave the stack they lose any destructive or obnoxious qualities which otherwise would be an annoyance to the surrounding country.

On the north side of the boiler the coke, soft coal, crushed ore and flux which will mix into different proportions, are wheeled on iron barrows to the scales, weighed and dumped into the smelter.

The ore will be quarried instead of mined by shaft or slope. A heavy cable 750 feet in length has been strung from the top of the plant down into the valley directly over the quarry from which a carriage is suspended by which the ore is taken by aerial tramway to the crusher.

There are ten tuyes on each side of the smelter through which water circulatees continually at the rate of 6,000 gallons an hour. Each one of these is three inches in diameter. As the metal runs from the bottom of the smelter into the big settling pot the copper goes to the bottom and the slag to the top.

Space has been provided for the installation of another smelter without adding any other machinery. This will double the output of the plant from 175 tons of copper ore to 350 tons and all that will be necessary is the installation of another smelter.

At a distance of about 400 feet from the boilers a dam was constructed in the creek. Two pumps were installed at the dam which pump the water up the hill into a large tank near the boiler house.

Disposes of $300,000 Estate.

The will of George P. Buckey, the banker of Union Bridge who died suddenly on Dec. 8 has been filed in the Orphan's Court at Westminster. The will disposes of an estate estimated at about $300,000. He gives a special bequest of $5,000 to his brother Daniel E Buckey of Littlestown, a like bequest to his sister Mrs. Mary Engler of Union Bridge. The rest of his estate is divided among his 18 nephews and nieces, one of whom, Elmer D Buckey, resides in Littlestown.

SET PLAYER TO THINKING

When a young man I was fond of playing chess. One day as I was deliberating over a move in the middle of a game I suddenly asked myself whether an expert standing beside me could predict what that move would be. Not, I saw, unless I had a past history as a chess player with which he was familiar. If I were a beginner he could not tell whether I would advance a pawn three squares, or move a castle aslant, or expose my queen to capture.

All these, and a multitude of other possibilities would be open to me and therefore to his prediction. But if I had a knowledge of the game, these possibilities would be closed. And if I were an accomplished player, the expert at my elbow might whisper to his neighbor, "There is only one move he can make. He must attack his opponent's king with his black bishop."

As I then, without hearing the remark, proceed to make that move should I feel belittled to have the expert announce that it was foreknown? Should I feel that having supposed my act to be one of freedom, I had now been deprived of something precious and myself degraded into a mere thing? On the contrary, I should probably feel much flattered and congratulate myself on being, and being known to be, a player guided by law. Evidently, then, as personality enlarges, conduct becomes more predictable. That was the impressive lesson taught me by this striking case.—G. H. Palmer in "The Problem of Freedom."

REMNANT OF THE ACADIANS

Small Group of Magdalen Islands Populated by Descendants of Those Unfortunate People.

Up in the center of the Gulf of St. Lawrence the small group of Magdalen islands are populated by three or four thousand lineal descendants of the Acadians under Champlain and De Monts, who were driven out of New France, Nova Scotia, by the English.

Since the first setlement in 1763 generations of the same families have raised scanty crops in the valleys and fed sheep and cattle on the high, conical hills which constitute a prominent feature of an insular landscape.

Year after year men have gone out on the waters of the gulf in search of the cod, mackerel and lobsters on which a livelihood depends. They are a simple, primitive people, these natives of the Magdalens, laboring all the while under circumstances that are most discouraging.

The archipelago contains 12 or 13 distinct islands, including several grim rocks which are not inhabited and never will be. But the remarkable feature about the physical formation of the whole group is the way in which one island is in some instances connected with another by a long stretch of sandy beach, enabling a person, if he desires to do so, to go for a score of miles or more along the most barren shore in the world, one that is uninhabited and unrelieved by vegetation of any kind, and the only animal life being the thousands of gulls, ferns, gannets and other sea fowl which are extremely numerous in all this region.

As to Adhesive Postage Stamps.

Rowland Hill had nothing to fear from enlightened officers of health foreboding that "stamp licking" would "disseminate consumption, diphtheria, smallpox and scarlet fever." It is remarkable to recall with what enthusiasm the public took to stamp licking in 1840. The adhesive stamp seems to have been only an after-thought of the great postal reformer, whose original proposal covered only the sale of ready-stamped envelopes. Even when he admitted the adhesive stamp as an alternative, he thought it would be "reserved for exceptional cases." But, in spite of newspaper jeers at "bits of sticking plaster for dabbing on the letters the public soon showed its mind. The stamped Mulready envelope proved a dead failure, while for weeks the supply of "sticking plaster" fell far below its demand.
